

BAD BREATH IN DOGS CAN BE A SIGN OF PLAQUE AND TARTAR BUILDUP

Plaque and tartar are common problems in dogs—just like in humans. Without cleaning, plaque and tartar can build up, attracting more bacteria that can lead to serious bad breath (halitosis). This is why daily dental care and regular vet visits are always important.

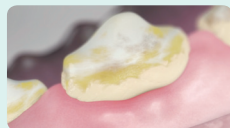

HOW PLAQUE, TARTAR, AND HALITOSIS DEVELOP

Bacteria attach and accumulate on tooth enamel

Plaque builds up, hardens into tartar

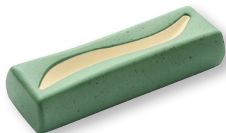

More bacteria attach, and halitosis develops

OraVet® DENTAL HYGIENE CHEWS FIGHT PLAQUE, TARTAR, AND BAD BREATH

OraVet Dental Hygiene Chews feature a unique dual-acting mechanism. The chewing action works to loosen and dislodge plaque, helping remove it from teeth. The active ingredient (delmopinol) forms a barrier to help protect against bacterial accumulation that leads to plaque, tartar, and bad breath—giving your dog a cleaner mouth and fresher breath.
